Thierry Cohen – digital photographer.

- Since 2010, paris-born artist Thierry Cohen has been developing 'villes éteintes' (darkened cities) – which depict the major cities of the world as they would appear at night without light pollution. Cohen captures images of certain regions, documenting the precise time, angle, and latitude and longitude of his exposure. By noting the precise latitude and angle of his cityscapes, he then tracks the earth's rotation to places of atmospheric clarity like the Mojave, the Sahara, and the Atacama desert, setting up his camera to record what is lost to modern urban dwellers.
- Compositing the two images, cohen creates a single new image full of resonance and nuance. the work is both political and spiritually questioning not only what we are doing to the planet but drawing unexpected connections between disparate locations. equally importantly it asks:
 - Cities that never sleep are made up of millions of individuals breaking natural cycles of work and repose. the series attempts to restore our vision, hoping to re-connect users to the infinite energy of the stars.
